NOAA Seeks Public Comment on the Proposed Rule for the 2011 Caribbean Annual Catch Limit Amendment

Comment Period Ends November 22, 2011

NOAA Fisheries Service seeks public comment on the proposed rule for the 2011 Caribbean Annual Catch Limit Amendment. This amendment to the Fishery Management Plans for reef fish, spiny lobster, queen conch resources, and corals and reef associated plants and invertebrates in the U.S. Caribbean is designed to bring those fisheries into compliance with the 2007 revisions to the Magnuson-Stevens Fishery Conservation and Management Act. Actions in this amendment will:

- For species not designated as undergoing overfishing (rate of removal is not too high), establish annual catch limits (amount of fish that can be taken without triggering accountability measures) and accountability measures (measures to prevent or address an overage of an annual catch limit) to prevent overfishing in both the commercial and recreational sectors.
- Some of the species addressed in this document include grunts, wrasses, boxfish, aquarium trade species and spiny lobster.
- Revise management of aquarium trade species and conch resources.
- Establish recreational fishing bag limits.
- Establish exclusive economic zone sub-boundaries for purposes of applying accountability measures.
- Adjust management measures as needed to constrain harvest to specified annual catch limits.
